A look back in time

TEXACO DOODLEBUG

Created in the 1930s in an attempt by the oil company to encourage American's to convert from coal to oil heating in their homes.

Designed by Norman Bel Geddes, the Tank Truck was built by Heil Co, Alabama, on a Diamond T chassis. An unknown number of these trucks were produced, some sources estimate there only ever being 6 made.

The futuristic design was decades ahead of it's time. The streamlined shape made it very aerodynamic and the compound curved windscreen wasn't mass produced until the 1950s.

One of it's space age features was the engine microphone. Since the engine was in the back a microphone was installed to allow the driver to hear when to change gears.

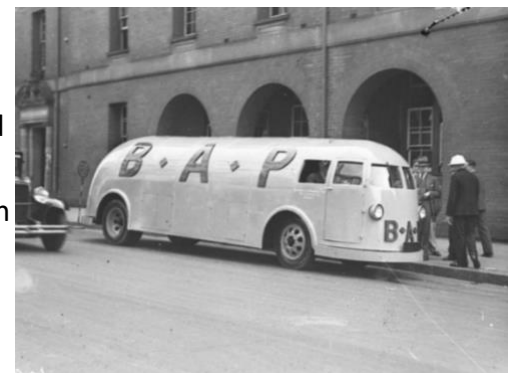

Specs:
Design: Norman Bel Geddes
Build: Heil Co
Chassis: Diamond T
Engine: Hercules six-cylinder rear mounted
Fuel Capacity: 5,680 litres
Length: 8 metres
Height: 1.8 metres

These photos taken in Australia show a similar tank truck for British Australia Petroleum. The photos were taken by Ted Hood on the streets of Sydney in November 1934, but little information can be found about the Australian tanker.

Thanks, Geoff Wilson, for the suggestion, it was an interesting find.
